FAQ:

Why has my listing been removed?

At Seasalt we take pride in our final product, including our intellectual property. We want our customers to be confident that where they see our photography, they know the product comes from us or an authorised seller. This is why Seasalt seeks to prevent customer confusion and deceptive practices by others by enforcing the eBay VeRO policies with regard to the use of Seasalt's intellectual property on eBay.

We regularly scan eBay for listings to make sure that listings do not contain any imagery that belongs to us. If your listing/s have been deemed to unlawfully contain copyright imagery that belongs to Seasalt we will submit a report to eBay's VeRo team to remove the listing.

Can I have permission to use Seasalt imagery?

Unfortunately not, Seasalt only allows authorised wholesalers who work in partnership with Seasalt to use our imagery. Please only use imagery which you take yourself when selling our products.
