Sooner is better

This year more than ever, sellers need to prepare early for the holiday season ahead. Consumers are ready to shop now, hunting for the perfect presents to give loved ones — and themselves — as long as items are on sale.

Retail analysts predict that consumers are going to start shopping even earlier for the 2023 holiday shopping season than they did last year.

Seller protections against shipping delays
As long as you meet your handling-time commitments, you will receive credit for on-time shipping for your Top Rated Seller qualifications. We’ll evaluate carrier performance and review protections as needed during this holiday season.

Adjusting estimated delivery dates eBay is continually assessing the carrier networks — looking at any delays right down to ZIP code level — and dynamically adjusting estimated delivery dates to provide buyers a more reasonable ETA for their items. There’s no need to extend your handling times. In fact, doing so could make your items appear to be shipping more slowly than they actually are, putting off potential buyers.

“Every holiday season comes with its share of excitement. Then, of course, questions and concerns come up regarding shipping costs, carrier capacity and on time deliveries. We are preparing for all of this now, and will continue to do so through peak to ensure the magic of the season is delivered to our community with care.”

Bank accounts are growing, but due to the rise in the cost of living and student loan payments restarting in October, shoppers are looking to score a good deal. Retailers will need to focus on offering competitive pricing strategies, attractive discounts, and compelling value.

Smart ship tips

How to make the most of the season — while saving time and money.
Provide accurate shipping details
Your buyers’ expectations are set based upon what you state in your listings. So make sure you ship according to the handling times and service (Economy, Standard, Expedited, or One-Day) you specify in your listings.

Keep handling times under 2 days eBay will automatically adjust the estimated delivery dates during the holiday rush, so there’s no need to extend handling times in your listings.

Be mindful of shipping deadlines, especially international ones
The holidays come with slower shipping times. Take note of carrier cutoff dates to ensure your packages reach their destination in time and remember that international delivery usually takes longer.
Use tracked shipping
Improve your buyer’s experience by allowing them to see where their package is at any moment.

Check guidelines for large and heavy items
To ensure a smooth delivery, a list of domestic freight carriers that offer trackable freight services for eBay items can be found here.

“... It’s important to look ahead to see what the holiday package surcharges and accessorial fees will be so they won’t come out of your margin.

Keep your packaging professional

It’s a reflection of your business. Shop eBay shipping supplies at ebay.com/supplies. They can be used with any carrier.

Calculate and compare shipping costs

Use our eBay Shipping Calculator to estimate your shipping options and costs. Compare services and costs from major shipping carriers, then set your shipping rates to maximize your profits or pass the savings along to your customers.

Packing your item

If you use a carrier’s branded shipping supplies, make sure you ship with that carrier. When possible, use regular packaging in standard sizes to ship your items. Pack your item securely (but don’t seal it yet) so you can make adjustments before sending it out. Avoid using plastic shipping wrap on the exterior of boxes.

Keep in mind that in addition to weight, the dimensions of a package also affect the shipping cost. Learn more about Dimensional (DIM) weight.
